

LITTLETON TALKS TO STATE BANKERS

ple, no one will attempt to deny; but that this justified the taking of a general hostile attitude by the government toward commerce is indefensible. The course of such a crusade is the cruel teaching to the discontented class that there is in the government some hidden power somewhere that can cure its discontent. The mischief made by such doctrine is the sowing of the seed of hate and discord, whose harvest will be revolution or socialism.

"In and through the agitation springing from this crusade there is the subtle suggestion that a just government can equalize the fortunes of the individual; that it can see to it that the rich do not grow too rich, nor the poor too poor; that the law can close up those inequalities which create discord and civilization has emphasized.

The two great parties to-day are struggling amid the confused confusion of this condition in frantic distraction, and they deliver blow after blow at whatever symptom they discern. The Republicans ride like a rudderless ship under the full steam of a strenuous captain, and they reckon not on wind or wave, but on the momentum of their own force. The Democrats are resting in the calm of accustomed defeat, but from habit they have an eye to the lifeboats. Half the men who profess to be, are not Republicans; and half the men who profess to be, are not Democrats. They are following under the direction of instinct or the allurements of advantage.

Conservatives and Radicals. "The line of cleavage is no longer between Democrats and Republicans. It is between Conservatives and Radicals. The conservatism that I mean is that conservatism which would hold the government so high above the reach of class interest that it could not hear the cry of the lawless mob nor the appeal of those far with privilege. The conservatism which would not care how rich its people grow if they stand alone and earn their wealth without aid of government, nor how poor they become if the government under the direction of oppression and inequality be the law.

"The radicalism which I mean is the radicalism of those some at the top and some at the bottom of society, who on the one hand would produce the anarchy of unbridled wealth, and on the other hand would produce the socialism of thriftless poverty.

"Our government must be rescued from its complicated alliance either with the labor class or with the capitalist class. It must be beyond the madness of the mob, or the arrogant and mercenary instincts of monopoly. It must be restored to a plane where it will not tremble at the murmur of disorder among the poor nor truckle to the arrogant demands of the rich. Its feet must stand firmly upon the Constitution. Its arms must be extended in equal protection of the life, liberty and property of every class, and upon its head must be the light of a new century streaming from the four quarters of the earth, transfiguring the spirit and the form of a great representative republic."

Other Addresses. Colonel Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers' Association, delivered an address on "The American Bankers' Association and Currency Legislation."

Hon. Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, spoke upon "The Banks and the Legislature." He went fully into the work of the past Legislature in its relation to the banks, and predicted that in the light of recent events the next Legislature will create a bureau of banking, which may be an independent department or subject to the Corporation Commission.

Mr. George E. Allen's address on the "American Institute of Banking" was very forcibly delivered and generously applauded.

The appointment of the Nominating Committee occurred to-day, and every one seemed pleased. In the afternoon most of the visitors journeyed to Recreation Park, and seemed agreeably surprised at the fine article of baseball they witnessed there, the local team defeating the Ronceverte team 2 to 0.

The Annual Banquet.

The large and magnificent dining-room of the Homestead hotel, turned over to the association in the evening for their annual banquet, the room was gorgeously decorated, and after all were seated presented a sight that was inspiring. The menu was one of the prettiest ever seen here, and every one seemed to prize them as souvenirs of the occasion.

Richard H. Smith, of Richmond, president of the association, was the toastmaster. These were the toasts:

"A Good Word for Optimism," by Martin W. Littleton, New York.

"Virginia as She is To-day," by Don P. Halsey, Lynchburg, Va.

FITZ. LEE CAMP ON THE MARCH

Local Organization, Spanish War Veterans, Plans Big Meeting for Fall.

Fitzhugh Lee Camp, Spanish War Veterans, held one of its most successful meetings yesterday. Two new members were initiated in, and applications for reinstatement were received from two old members. Commander Le Masurier expressed himself as much gratified at the encouraging condition of the camp.

A committee on entertainment, consisting of Captain G. N. Skipwith, Major C. G. Bossieux, Lieutenant C. W. Bowers, Lieutenant E. B. Loying and Lieutenant R. E. Peyton, was appointed to arrange an entertainment, at which one of the features will be an address by Captain Thomas R. Marshall, who served with distinction in Cuba and the Philippines and in the Santiago fight. Addresses by other notable speakers will be delivered, and music will be furnished by local talent.

To Attend Encampment. Captain A. H. Sands, past commander, was directed to ascertain and report on transportation, hotel rates, etc., in connection with the annual encampment to be held in Boston September 1st, 2d and 3d.

The receipts of the camp, as shown by the quartermaster's report, were very gratifying. The camp is now operating under up-to-date financial rules and regulations, one of the local banks being designated yesterday as depository.

It was decided that this special meeting should not interfere with the regular meeting on July 14th, at which the following committees will report: National encampment, membership and entertainment. Reports of officers will be made. Delegates to the national encampment will be elected at that meeting.

The big entertainment which the committee is working on will probably be held in the early fall, and is designed to be an open affair, at which there will be present many specially invited guests and friends of the order. Fitzhugh Lee Camp is on a stronger and better footing than ever, and now ranks as one of the most progressive organizations of the kind in the city. The matter of uniforms and perfecting the camp for participating in parades, etc., is under consideration.

Folger, Jr., prominently identified with the Tidewater Oil Company, was made a member of the board of directors to succeed Frank Q. Barstow, resigned. Mr. Flieger's resignation was due to advanced years and his desire to devote more of his time to personal affairs. Continued illness is given as the reason for Mr. Barstow's resignation.

ADDRESS VIRGINIA BANKERS

MARTIN W. LITTLETON. The Brilliant New York Lawyer, who delivered principal address before Virginia Bankers' Association at Hot Springs yesterday.

News Gathered From Southside..

The sanitary crusade which has been waged for the past two years in Manchester by the City Board of Health is bearing fruit, as is shown by the long list of citizens who were summoned yesterday to appear before the Police Court on June 23d for failure to install sewer connections. The list, which includes two churches, is as follows: R. H. Crooke, No. 112 East Eleventh Street; N. G. Robinson, No. 217 East Twelfth; Mary Jane Mosby, No. 1700 Decatur, and No. 105 East Seventeenth streets; Cal. Clements, Nos. 205-211 East Thirteenth; G. W. Longworth, No. 215 East Thirteenth; T. Hart, No. 221 East Eleventh; W. E. Parkinson, No. 215 East Thirteenth; R. E. Satchfield, No. 219 East Thirteenth; Bainbridge Street Baptist Church, Eleventh and Bainbridge; Stockton Street Baptist Church, Seventh and Stockton streets; Granite Building Company, No. 1919 Decatur and No. 14 West Sixth streets; Mrs. William Elam, No. 1803 Everett Street; Mrs. Bacon, No. 1109 Decatur Street; J. A. Baber (trustee), No. 100 West Sixth Street; A. L. Adams (agent), No. 212 East Tenth; John Baker, No. 1617 Bainbridge Street; A. J. Goolsby, No. 1501 Bainbridge Street; A. L. Adams (agent), Nos. 901, 903, 905, 907, 909 and 911 Morgan's Row; Henrietta Hobson, No. 111 West Fifteenth; R. H. Richardson, No. 1310 Hull Street.

What Inspector Ely Says. Sanitary Inspector D. E. Ely said last night that while conditions had become somewhat improved in Manchester since he first entered upon his present duties two years ago, there was ample room for further and better sanitation, even in the heart of the city. He said that within the past two years upwards of 500 dwellings had been reported by him for failure to comply with those ordinances requiring that all dwellings have proper pipe connections with the city sewers.

He says approximately 400 of these names have been eliminated, and that at present there are about 100 citizens who are still delinquent in this line. At No. 212 East Tenth Street there is a dwelling occupied by seven negroes, he says, which is absolutely devoid of all sanitary equipment. This is a respectable residential section of the city. Inspector Ely said that property belonging to some of the highest municipal officers of the city has been reported over and over again, but that little or no action has been taken.

President of Health Board. With reference to the unsanitary conditions of certain sections of the city, the President of the Manchester Board of Health expressed himself last night as surprised that there was not more sickness in the city in summer. He said that for two years his department had been fighting for better sanitation. That at many times he had felt himself discouraged, but had been incited to redoubled efforts purely through the alarming exigencies of the situation.

To said that while he had at no time looked for an epidemic to arise out of the unsanitary conditions in Manchester, he believed, however, that much contagion was due to this cause alone.

A member of the City Assembly said last night that conditions in his neighborhood were most objectionable, declaring that these conditions were entirely due to a failure on the part of the authorities to enforce that ordinance requiring all premises to be supplied with sewer connections.

Case Under Adjudication. The case of the White Oak Coal Company vs. the City of Manchester was argued at length before the Corporation Court yesterday. Judge Clifton reserved his decision.

The case grows out of the refusal of the company to pay the required license tax on its wagons, an appeal being taken from the lower court.

During the case, a peculiarly novel and rather startling caterpillar has invaded the trees on the courthouse green, and is working great destruction with foliage.

The city is justly proud of Court Square, and it has been suggested by several citizens that immediate steps be taken to prevent further damage.

There is a variety of trees surrounding the courthouse, among which the elms and cottonwoods appear to have been singled out by the invading caterpillars, and upon these their work of destruction seems focused. It has been suggested that by pruning the branches the greater part of the trees may be saved.

Leonard in London. "Doc" Toney, of Manchester, better known as "Eddie Leonard, the King of American Minstrels," has been touring England during the spring, and is at present playing at the Coliseum, in London.

The Music Hall and Theatre Review, London, June 6th, carries the following: "Mr. Leonard regrets that he cannot accept the many flattering offers he has received to stay in this country, for he must return to America to fulfill a contract with the George Evans (Honeyboy) Minstrels, under the direction of Cohan & Harris; but Mr. Leonard returns to England next summer for a long run at a London hall."

The Liverpool Lance of an earlier date says: "American 'turns' continue to arrive."

The latest is "Eddie Leonard and his boys," who made their first appearance in England at Liverpool last week. Eddie is a genial Southerner from "way down in old Virginia," and he declares that he is a "real Southerner singer. He is not satisfied with "moon" as it is, but turns it into "moan-hoo-hoo-hoo-n" and "blacks up" to do it. He has some pretty songs of his own composition, and dances acrobatically. He has been twenty years a favorite in the States, and the boys who work with him dance wonderfully.

Dr. Criddle has been quite sick for some time, and is visiting his mother, who is a physician. His postoffice will be Gills, Va., and his pulpit will be filled by visiting ministers during his absence.

people are for Cleveland." Mr. Gibson replied, "and he will sweep the country like an avalanche." After the election, when Cleveland had won, his friends presented him with a bronze bust of the new President, bearing the inscription, "We are all Democrats together."

Mr. Gibson was a firm friend of Dr. Hoge, first pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, and kept as one of his most valued treasures a photograph of the pastor, with the following letter:

"Richmond, Va., May 24, 1893. "My Dear Mr. Gibson: I send you this picture as a token of my regard for you, as a good Democrat, a good Presbyterian, a good friend and a good man. Sincerely yours, "MOSES D. HOGE."

Father and Son in War Service. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Gibson enlisted in the Governor's Guard, of this city, and had charge of building operations on the plant for making hospital appliances. His eldest son, James R. Gibson, became a member of the Richmond Howitzers, and served throughout the war. He was noted among his friends for his good humor and hearty cordiality. Throughout his long life he had never been sick a day until this last fatal illness. He was the survivor of a family of four brothers—John, George, William and David—all of whom came from Scotland to settle in Richmond. Mr. Gibson leaves one daughter, Mrs. D. E. Lumsden; one son, Mr. George Gibson, Jr.; and a granddaughter, Miss Ella Gibson.

His funeral will take place from the Second Presbyterian Church this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The active pallbearers will be Messrs. George Call, George S. Hayes, J. A. Grigg, W. J. Gibson, Henry H. Maguire, John H. Clark, Oscar Swineford and A. L. Lumsden. Honorary—Judge George L. Christian, Colonel W. Miles Cary, Dr. Moses D. Hoge, Jr., Dr. J. G. Trevallian and Messrs. F. G. Glasgow, Maxwell Blake, M. C. Gilliam, W. T. Fitzgerald, T. William Pemberton and S. H. Hayes.

Mr. Gibson, Sr., one of Richmond's oldest and most respected citizens, died yesterday morning at his residence, No. 207 East Canal Street, in his ninety-first year. He came to Richmond from Scotland at the age of twenty-two, and had been a leading builder and contractor here for sixty years. At first he was connected with the firm of John & George Gibson, but was later associated with his younger brother, William Gibson, under the firm name of George & William Gibson, on the corner of Sixth and Cary streets. It was this firm which remodeled the Second Presbyterian Church of this city, in 1873. The building had to be enlarged to accommodate the crowds of people attracted there by its first pastor, Dr. Moses D. Hoge. Two wings were added, under the supervision of Mr. Gibson. He accomplished this in such a way as to preserve the Gothic simplicity and beauty of the entire structure. The builder had an additional interest in the work from the fact that he was one of the original members of this church at the time of its foundation by Dr. Hoge in 1845. Throughout his life Mr. Gibson remained a staunch Presbyterian. He was devoted alike to church and pastor. He became a deacon, and at the time of his death was an elder. He was proud of his work in enlarging the church, and spoke of this achievement as the "masterpiece of his career."

Mr. Gibson had been an ardent Democrat all his life. An interesting story is told of him in connection with the campaign of Cleveland in 1892. Some of his friends asked him how about Cleveland, when David B. Hill had secured the New York delegation? "The
